William Orr Goudy and Alice Brown made their way from North Ireland to Australia and eventually Ballarat. Two of their descendants, Rob and Raymond Goudey have completed a lot of research and have put together the story of their ancestors. Portions of this story have been replicated in this edition of LINK and the full story will be published on the BDGS website along with the many sources used to put the story together.

DNA is the latest tool in assisting to find your Ancestors. This can take the guesswork out of your research. Not an easy science.

There are a number of photographs throughout the newsletter of scenes over time in Ballarat. These are photos posted to Facebook page Old Time Photos of Yesteryear. Most are taken from the research undertaken at the State Library Victoria by Ormond Butler and his brother who enjoy sharing the results of their hobby.

Read about Annie Westcott a WW1 nurse for whom there is going to be a Commemorative Service at the Ballarat Old Cemetery. Members are welcome to attend but can also read about her memorable life. Page 5

Family Membership: $35.00
Overseas Membership: $25.00

Membership year from 1 July to 30 June

The Society's Library is housed in the Australiana Research Room

Ballarat Central Library 178 Doveton Street, North Ballarat
Room open for "Members" 5 to 7pm Friday Nights

Certain Books from our collection are able to be borrowed by our members for up to 2 weeks.

Visitors are most welcome to attend meetings held at the Ballarat Library in Doveton Street on the 4th Tuesday of each month at 7.30 pm
No meeting December or January.

Welcome to 2016 and the first LINK for the year. I do hope you all had a wonderful holiday break and are ready to continue your research.

The meetings should be popular with some interesting speakers set for the first half of the year.

I was to give a talk on using TROVE in February, however it is being taken off line the day before and a new format is to be released later that week! Good timing TROVE. Instead I will take you through Papers Past (New Zealand) and British Newspapers.

In March Yvonne Horsfield will be talking about her Chinese ancestry.

In April we will be meeting Gerald Jensen at the Old Colonist's Club in Lydiard Street.

In May Neil Leckie, historian from the Ballarat Ranger Barracks will be with us.

In this edition there is an outline of DNA. This is the latest craze in genealogy and is very interesting although not easy to understand. In June this year we have

Fadi J Charchar PhD FAHA

Robert HT Smith Chair in Cardiovascular Genomics Federation University Australia who lectures around the world and is an expert in DNA and a great speaker.

You can always check for meeting topics at www.ballaratgenealogy.org.au/about/meetings

As always I am looking for articles for LINK and if you do not have an article I would love suggestions of subjects you would like covered.

You will also find an advertisement for UTAS who runs a Diploma of Genealogy. These are classes run online and each unit is only for a few weeks and are free. You can never know enough when it comes to research. New records are being released online every day and our hobby, or obsession, is becoming easier and more accessible all the time. This is due to the hard work of many volunteers who spend hours working to bring these records to you for an affordable cost.

President's Report

It is pleasing to see that the latest section of The Courier has been uploaded in the National Library of Australia's website Trove. This brings the project to 1879, which means that the coverage of the Ballarat papers is approaching a twenty-five year period. The Committee will continue its focus on this publication. This recognises not only the continuity in this publication but also the increasing number of pages in later editions and the inclusion of important social commentary.

The Committee will continue to search for suitable grants, philanthropic and other sources that might add to the funds available to the Society. The capacity for this Society to function as a charitable organisation to support this work cannot be over-stated. Without that legal status, the project would be more arduous.

Some researchers may have noted that various years of The Star, another Ballarat paper, have been appearing in Trove. It is understood that this work is funded by the State Library of Victoria's digitisation program. Since newspapers post 1879 might be expected to appear up to about 1924, this means that in some instances a researcher might identify a date for that period from that source before switching over to The Courier, even though the search will require access to the microfilm.

Sustained research to expand the information of the individuals, who have been identified as important workers either voluntary or employed, in Ballarat's community support for the national effort in World War One, continues. Anyone who would like to reinforce skills in the use of the Digger based indexes of Victorian Birth, Death and Marriage records and Trove could offer assistance in this work. This will be appreciated. This work is the Society's use of the Anzac Centenary Local Grants Program Commemorative Grant.

Annie Westcott

A Commemoration Service for WW1 Nurse, Annie Westcott will be held at the Ballarat Cemetery on 27 February 2016.

She was a Ballarat Base Hospital Past Trainee Nurse and is now in an unmarked grave at the Ballarat Old Cemetery.

The Ballarat Base Hospital Trained Nurses League with the Ballarat Cemetery Trust will be unveiling a plaque on her grave – giving her an identity & recognising her service in WW1.

Annie's Story:-

Annie Maynard Westcott was 24 years of age when she commenced her training at the Ballarat Base Hospital on January 16th 1899.

She graduated three years later. In addition to her nursing in Ballarat, she worked as a sister at Maryborough and as matron at Maldon and Inglewood.

Working conditions for nurses were challenging, but the long shifts and dilapidated nurses' quarters were preparing her, and many of her nursing friends, for greater challenges that awaited them near the battlefields of Gallipoli and France.

She was 40 years of age, with 16 years of nursing and administration experience, when she joined the Australian Army Nursing Service in October 1915.

A month later she embarked from Melbourne on the Orsova and sailed to Egypt just in time for the influx of sick and wounded soldiers being evacuated from Gallipoli.

She joined the staff at the 1st Australian General Hospital based in the Grand Heliopolis Palace Hotel in Cairo but the growing number of patients forced the hospital to expand into the neighbouring Luna Park where the ticket office became an operating theatre.

To join the AANS women had to be unmarried and between the ages of 25 and 40, consequently due to her age Annie's overseas service was cut short. On January 21st 1916 she left from Suez aboard the Commonwealth nursing soldiers who were being returned home.

She then served with the AANS until February 1917.

She married Frederick Smith in 1917 and moved to Gippsland but later returned to Ballarat where she died in 1951.

She was buried with other family members whose names are recorded on adjacent headstones but for some reason Annie's name is not there.

Please note that people can attend even though the RSVP date has passed

Introduction to Using DNA for Genealogy

Published: 27 January 2015 | Written by Louise Coakley
<http://www.genie1.com.au/blog/51-introduction-to-using-dna-for-genealogy>

Buzzes of excitement have become apparent in family history societies across the country over the last year or so, as more and more genealogists are starting to use DNA testing as an additional family history research tool.

Due to technological advances and affordable prices, DNA testing is now becoming widely used to confirm family lines and connect with biological relatives.

Goals & Benefits

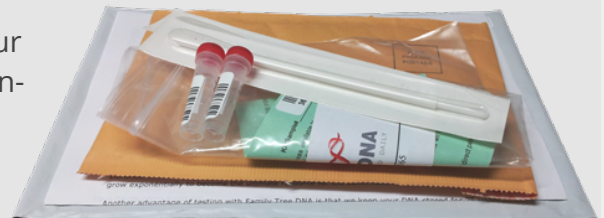

You may want to discover branches of your tree not found through regular research, confirm or disprove family relationships, find cousins with whom to share research & photos, see if persons who share your surname are related, discover your ancient origins, potentially solve long-standing research 'dead-ends', or you may simply be curious to see what your DNA reveals.

Requirements

Don't let the scientific nature of DNA scare you off, as once the basic test types are understood, the minimum technical know-how required is the use of email in order to contact your DNA matches.

Collaborate with your new-found genetic relatives using your traditional genealogical skills to determine your ancestors-in-common.

For those who want to delve deeper, there are many free tools and learning resources.

The DNA Test Kit

A DNA kit is ordered online from one of three major DNA testing companies located in the US.

Your test kit arrives by mail or courier within a few days to a few weeks, depending on company.

The DNA tests themselves are very simple to use:

- either a cotton-toothed cheek swab for FTDNA's kit
- or a saliva sample for 23andMe or AncestryDNA's kit.

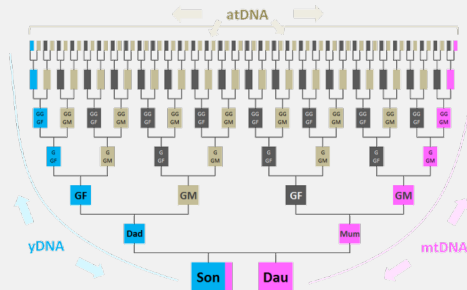

After testing, you simply post your sample back to the US in the pre-addressed envelope or package. All notifications are via email and results are provided via an online account.

This article and more can be found on the web page above. More will be printed in next LINK

DNA Test Types

There are several different types of DNA that can be tested for genealogical purposes:

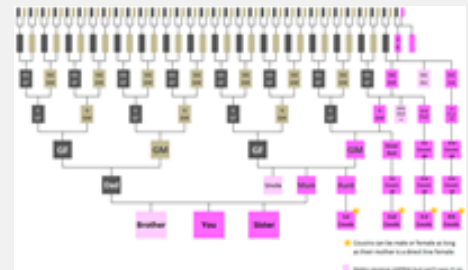

Y-chromosome DNA (Y-DNA):

Males inherit a y-chromosome from their father, through his father, his father, his father, etc, on the direct paternal line, as per the blue boxes on the chart above. Refer to Y-DNA: the Direct Paternal Line for more detailed information, pedigree charts and examples of how Y-DNA testing can be useful in your family history research.

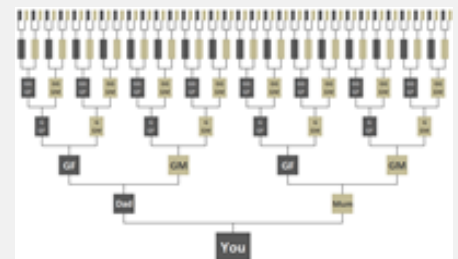

Mitochondrial DNA (mtDNA):

Everyone inherits mitochondrial DNA from their mother, through her mother, her mother, her mother, etc. on the direct maternal line, as per the pink boxes on the chart above. Refer to mtDNA: the Direct Maternal Line for more detailed information, pedigree charts and examples of how mtDNA testing can be useful in your family history research.

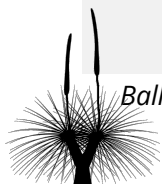

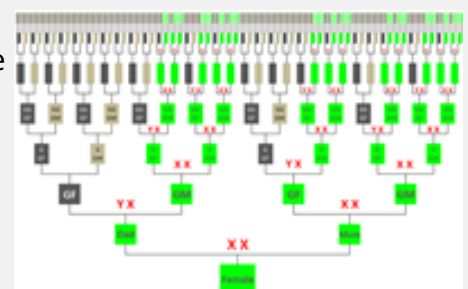

Autosomal DNA (atDNA):

Autosomal DNA is inherited from all ancestral lines, so anyone can be tested and matches may descend from anyone on the pedigree chart above, up to about 6 generations back. Refer to atDNA: Finding Matches on All Ancestral Lines for more detailed information, pedigree charts and examples of how atDNA testing can be useful in your family history research.

X-chromosome DNA (X-DNA):

X-chromosomes follow specific inheritance patterns, which are different for males and females. If you share X-DNA with a match, your shared ancestors will be restricted to particular lines of your pedigree. Refer to X-DNA's helpful inheritance patterns for more detailed information & pedigree charts related to X-DNA inheritance.

William Orr Goudy and Alice Brown: from Greyabbey to the Victorian Goldfields

Rob Goudey, A3584, and Ramon Goudey

William Orr Goudy and Alice Brown were North of Ireland ancestors of the present Goudey family in Victoria, Australia. A year ago we knew very little about them, since they left no letters, diaries or other belongings that we know of, and few if any stories about them have trickled down through the generations. In this article we tell what we have been able to learn so far about their lives, and we invite other family historians to suggest how we might extend our family story back into Northern Ireland.

Marriage

William Orr Goudy and Alice Brown were married in Greyabbey Presbyterian Church on 18 January 1850 by Rev David Jeffrey. Witnesses were Robert Goudy and Charles Kerr. Alice was under 21 years of age and, being a minor, would have needed her parents' permission to marry. William Orr Goudy was aged 21 years or older, and was a labourer living in the parish of Glenwherry in County Antrim. We don't know where William and Alice lived after their wedding, and whether some of their children were born, and perhaps died, in Ireland.

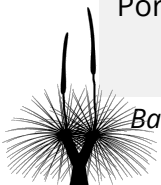

Victoria

The Colony of Victoria had been formally separated from New South Wales since 1 July 1851. Later in that month gold was discovered at Clunes, which sparked discoveries elsewhere in Victoria, leading to the Victorian Gold Rush. Many diggers arrived from around the world, aiming to find their fortunes and then return home. Many, including William and Alice, followed the gold rush and stayed on permanently.

The couple appear to have become part of this community, comprising members who kept in touch with each other and with their financial broker, Mr William Orr (1828–1868) of Greyabbey. This is evidenced by a letter from Hamilton Mc Millan in Forest Creek to William Orr on 23 June 1861, in which Mc Millan related what he had learned about other settlers from Greyabbey based on a conversation with "Wm Orr Gowdie".

Voyage of the Runnymede

William and Alice have so far not been found listed as passengers in any Australian shipping records. Fortunately, a document recorded in 1869 and probably based on a conversation with William himself, stated that he had arrived in Australia "Per Runnymede from Birkenhead to Portland Bay 1853".

Birth certificates and other official documents provide a series of snapshots of the family over time. On 22 July 1854 a daughter, Sarah Ann, was born at Forest Creek (renamed Chewton), near Castlemaine. William was a storekeeper, and at that time recorded that they had one child living and four deceased. We have the names of only three of those deceased children, Joseph, William and Agnes. One other child may have died un-named. None of the deaths appear to have been officially registered. It's possible that some of those children may have died in Ireland before the couple emigrated. Some may have been victims of the rough ocean voyage to Australia, and were buried at sea. Some may not have survived the arduous journey to central Victoria, or conditions in the gold fields after they arrived there. Conditions were particularly difficult for small children, and Pennyweight Flat cemetery contains the bodies of more than 200 children who died in the Forest Creek area between 1853 and 1857.

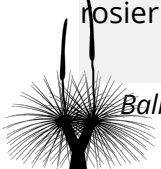

In April 1855, William posted a reward in the Victorian Government Gazette for the return of a horse that had strayed or was stolen. He offered £5 reward and requested that the horse be returned to the Digger's Arms Hotel, Daisy Hill, Back Creek (renamed Talbot).

Another child, Agnes Jane, was born on 8 July 1860 at Yandoit, a gold-mining and agricultural area on Jim Crow Creek. The older children, William John and Sarah Ann, would then have been six and seven years old respectively. William Orr Goudey was a storekeeper and miner. On 7 June 1861 William's name appeared in the Victorian Government Gazette as a shareholder on an application to register the "Hit-or-Miss" Gold Mining Company (Yandoit). We know, from the letter by Hamilton McMillan, that the couple was still in touch with other immigrants from Greyabbey at this time.

Their next child, Mary Ellen, was born at Blanket Flat (renamed Eganstown) on 28 February 1863. Alice registered the birth and listed the other children as Sarah Ann (9) and Agnes (3). The family surname was recorded by the registrar as "Orrgoudey", and William's occupation was given as "miner". A son, John Robert Goudey, was born at Eastern Hill near Daylesford, on 18 October 1865. Again the birth was registered by Alice, and the same registrar recorded the family name as "Orrgoudey". It may be that Alice did not check the spelling. However, we may infer from this that the name "Orr" was still important to them. By the time John Robert's birth was registered, their son William John is no longer shown. He is assumed to have died sometime between 9 and 14 years of age, from cause unknown.

The peak of the Victorian gold rush had long passed, and they don't appear to have been among the lucky few who struck it rich. Instead, they had experienced hard physical work in a harsh environment for apparently little financial reward. Although they succeeded in raising five children who eventually survived to adulthood, they had also lost many. One can't help thinking that any letters they may have received from relatives in Greyabbey or Pittsburgh might have described a rosier life than the one they found in Victoria. Information from this time onward seems to reveal a

RESEARCH

BURBIDGE I would like to make an enquiry into having some research done on my family who lived in Ballarat from the late 1840s. I have all the standard info such as bdms etc. I was hoping to get more info into their life for the book I am writing. I am chasing in particular the following: William Campbell BURBIDGE - 1. Further info on house fire 6th April 1867 (Coroner Investigation held, would like the details) 2. Further info on the possibility of being a pioneer of Ballarat. 3. Further information on his occupation (miner on marriage certificate, engine driver on death certificate.) William Edward BURBIDGE - 1. Further information on work at School of Mines, 2. Further information on involvement with Photography Club and Botanic Gardens.

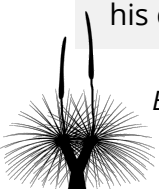

CAVE I am doing research into my mother's family the CAVES. Her gr grandfather Joseph CAVE worked as a gardener on the curator's staff of the Ballarat Botanical Gardens from about 1862 until the late 1890s. He died in 1901. Also his son William Bruce CAVE might have also worked at the gardens. He was very famous in horticultural circles in the 1890s and 1900s. I was wondering if you have any records of him.

DEAKIN My friend and I are conducting research into George Eadon DEAKIN and his place in her family history. George's brother John was her great grandfather. Did he live in Ballarat? Any details of the circumstances of his death? Any information that may help fill the gap in his life from 1857 (arrival) to 1886 (life in Ballarat, place of residence, death in Horsham)? We understand he was a coachbuilder. Concerning the second death registration (Victoria 1886, #5737). Are you able to provide any information as to whom this registration may apply?

DOWD I have enclosed a list of children born to John DOWD and Elizabeth LEDWICK. I have been unable to find out any information on John and Elizabeth. I am the granddaughter of Louisa May DOWD and would like to find out more.

ELDRIDGE and BRADSHAW My grandmother was Ida Irene ELDRIDGE who was born in Birregurra, Victoria in 1886. She had an elder brother Henry Harrold two years her senior, also born in Birregurra, and two younger sisters Alice Maud and Ruby Gladace born in Barramunga (??) in 1889 and 1890 respectively. My grandmother's parents were Thomas ELDRIDGE and Alice Alexandria ELDRIDGE nee BRADSHAW. I have not been able to find much information at all about Thomas ELDRIDGE. My belief is that Thomas and Alice's marriage broke down and that the children were boarded out with relatives. My grandmother eventually returned to the UK where she died in Farnham, Surrey in the early 1970s. The BRADSHAW family has proved more rewarding. My gr gr grandparents were William Burrows BRADSHAW and Rebecca WELLS who came to Australia with four children some time between 1836 and 1841. I would be interested to find out anything about the family. Where did they live? Are any of the houses where they lived still standing. What did the menfolk of the family, and if possible the women too, in more recent times, do for a living? I am travelling to Australia in February and March of 2016 and will be coming to Ballarat in early March.

ETHERSAY Can you tell me if the death of Richard Temple ETHERSEY (ETHERSAY) who died 13 Oct 1853 aged 18 months was registered by James ETHERSEY (the self appointed sextant) in his early registration book. Also, am I able to obtain a copy of the inquest held on the 22 Mar 1856 on Eliza ETHERSEY who died following childbirth on the 21 March?

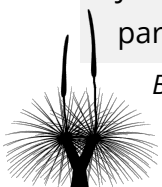

HARRIS I am wondering if you are able to help me with some more research? I am continuing my research re Thomas Shepherd HARRIS. Is it possible my gr gr grandfather William Symons HARRIS travelled with his brother Thomas Shepherd HARRIS to Australia? I haven't been able to find any records. The previous research you did for me has information that shows Thomas left his wife Hannah Ford HARRIS/WEBB nee RICHARDS and that 2 of their daughters (Ada & Louise) were placed into State care and little Sydney Wallace died at only 4 months old.

HENDERSON I am trying to locate the present position of Allotments 16 and 17 on Main Street, Ballarat in 1858. My gr grandfather, John HENDERSON operated a boot shop in partnership with William McLean at premises on those allotments. I appreciate the layout of the streets/allotments may have changed significantly and that it may not be possible to accurately locate the original site. I will be in Ballarat on Sat 28 November and hope it is possible to consider this question before then.

MORRIS I am keen to try to find out more info about my gr gr grandfather Samuel MORRIS, b 1829 who I believe emigrated to Victoria from Northamptonshire in the early 1850s possibly together with his parents Arthur and Martha. He married in 1858 to Lydia BRICE of Chewton, and had his first two children there. By 1867 his children were being born in Ballarat. They had a total of 12 children, and my gr grandfather is one of the youngest - Albert Edgar b 1877, Ballarat. Samuel's father Arthur died in Ballarat in 1875. His mother died in 1886 in Maryborough. I am keen to know what they did for work. Were they gold miners or not?...and where they lived....and anything else about their roles in the Ballarat community.

POWER I note from your website that you have access to the Index to the Register of Baptisms for St. John's Anglican Church at Ballan, 1849-1991. Could you oblige me by checking for the following baptism. The child in question was born out of wedlock and raised as the child of her grandparents, John and Ann Jane POWER. Family Name: POWER, Given Names: Catherine Elizabeth (or possibly Sarah Elizabeth), Place of Birth: Ballan, Date of Birth: 31 Oct 1878, Father's Name: not known, Mother's Name: Mary Ann POWER.

Hotel Information being Sought

I am researching my family tree which has lead me to details of my great great uncles William Henry and Robert MILLAR SMYTH who had hotels in and around Ballarat about the 1870s.

I came across the possible reference below to them and wondered if anyone could possibly advise how I might be able to get any more detail ?

Dear Family Historians,

The University of Tasmania is launching a fully online Diploma of Family History in 2016. This exciting program will provide plenty of opportunities for archival and genealogical sleuths to improve their repertoire of skills. The course will consist of eight units, six of which will be on offer in 2016:

- Introduction to Family History
- Writing Family History
- Convict Ancestors
- Place, Image, Object
- Writing the Family Saga
- Founders and Survivors

We are delighted to offer students who have already completed Introduction to Family History and/or Writing Family History the opportunity to continue their studies.

Convict Ancestors

Starting in April this unit will use the wealth of expertise in convict history at the University of Tasmania to walk students through Australia's UNESCO-listed convict archive. It will include important information on how to read and interpret convict records as well as a host of tips for making sense of trial records and information gleaned from other judicial and penal series. This unit is a must for anyone interested in the nation's convict past.

6/02/2016, 9:24 PM

Place, Image, Object

This unit, planned for June 2016, will provide students with ways of understanding how objects, images and buildings can provide a valuable context for family history. The material past, all too often neglected, can add powerful insights into the lives our ancestors lived.

Writing the Family Saga

Adventure or romance, tragedy or triumph, legends of extraordinary feats or quiet tales of everyday struggles. What kinds of stories are there in your family tree? This unit, which builds on Writing Family History, will commence in June 2016 and introduce students to key skills for the writing of fiction and/or non-fiction based on genealogical records.

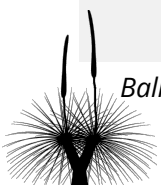

Founders and Survivors

This unit will provide students with an in-depth knowledge of the inner workings of the transportation system. Convict Ancestors will be a pre-requisite, so make sure that you sign up for that unit if you wish to enrol in this detailed exploration of the lives led by transported convicts and their descendants. The unit is planned for an October 2016 start.

For further information and to secure your place, please fill in the online form here, or if you would like further information, please contact us via email at ASC.Contact@utas.edu.au, or call (03) 6226 6365.

PLEASE NOTE the above courses are available on line and are free for Australian Citizens. They take little work and have on line lectures to guide you along the way.

Some members have already participated in a couple of these subjects and there is some great backup support in Facebook pages.

William who is experiencing difficulty in coping, and Alice, with five children at home, needing to find ways to manage independently.

In December 1865 at Creswick a "William Gowdy" appeared in court charged with having been "drunk and disorderly". He was discharged with a caution. There was an additional charge of destroying two buckets while in the lock-up, for which he was charged a total of 19 shillings. On Tuesday 11 June 1867, again at Creswick, a "W Goudy" appeared in court along with four other men charged with having been "drunk and disorderly". All were cautioned and discharged.

In 1868 the family lived at Sebastopol, near Ballarat, where William worked as a miner. He was about 40 years old. On 3 August their last child, Eliza Alice, was born at Sebastopol.

On 16 July 1879 William was admitted to the Ballarat Benevolent Asylum for reasons of "general debility". He resided there until his death on 29 June 1881, with cause given as "paralysis" and "exhaustion". He was about 52 years old. The comment on the asylum record 25 reads "5pm. His remains buried by his children". He was buried with Alice in the Presbyterian section at the New Ballarat Cemetery. William and Alice left in their wake a young family, about whom we know very little. The 1869 Ballarat Directory still gave William's address as Tait Street, Sebastopol, and his occupation was shown as "miner". In January of this year William appears to have committed a serious error of judgement.

He was arrested and remanded to Ballarat Gaol. William had in fact presented two forged cheques, one for £3 10s on 23 January at Ballarat, and the other for £5 5s on 8 February at Clunes, and both signed with his mother's family name "Johnson". The amounts suggest an attempt to escape the debt from the previous year.

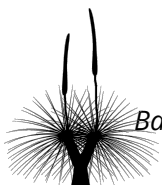

On 10 April 1869 William was tried at the Ballarat Circuit Court and given two cumulative sentences, four years and two years, "hard labour on the roads".

Editors Note: This is only part of the story sent in by Rob Goudey. He speaks of family who went to America and also of William and Alice and their struggle to survive and his time in prison while Alice had to endure hardship while raising five children. He has also written the sources he has used to piece their lives together which includes Books, official Records (BDM, Shipping, Cemetery etc.) 27 Sources in all. The Family are still looking for information and possible suggestions on further research.

As the document is so long and not possible to print in LINK it will instead be published on <http://www.ballaratgenealogy.org.au> website for people to read in full and note how very well the sources have been quoted. This will providing sources of research as well as an interesting read of a family history.
